Favors Mass Protest Against Tariff Bill To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

F 1200 economists can obtain such publicity with an expenditure of about $140, what could 25 per cent (Literary Digest per cent of returns) of our voting population do?

Let me urge the voters in the 1928 presidential election to back up the protest of those clear-minded, public-spirited objectors with a follow-up that Washington will heed.

Suggest that we write or wire President Hoover that we object to a further chunk being knocked out of our pay envelope with the tariff bill. Tell him you have a right to shoot holes in his pay check with your votes. If he does not listen to you, tell him you will be suing him in 1932 or before (he has his eye on a second term) I don't care what you tell him, but tell him, you and your household. Protest against further digging into your family purse for the necessities of life, against the further loss of export trade which will hit you and me.

Tell him, public opinion (Mr. Hoover knows who that is) demands his veto on the Hawley-Soot (did I say Soot?) tariff Visualize the protesting power of 25 per cent of the popular vote cast in the 1928 presidential election. Even Grundy could appreciate that.

The Globe-Democrat says of the Missouri Supren Court decision in the case of the Kansas City street railways:

This decision should clear the way to a settlement of the municipal transportation question in St. Louis. It seems obvious that there is no way of evading the authority of the commission as to rates of fare on street railways. The commission has declined to assume jurisdiction of rates on bus lines operated within a municipality, and the Supreme Court yesterday refused to issue a mandamus compelling the commission to take upon itself that authority. But however that may be, it is certain that the commission has and must exercise full control over rates on street railway lines, and it would seem that under this ruling its authority must apply with or without a local authority must apply with or without a local franchise and regardless of the form of fran-

Which is to say, as the Globe-Democrat does in another part of the same editorial, that "home rule is dream." That it is not a dream is proved by an authorized statement by the Missouri Public Service Commission's counsel of the commission's duties and powers published in the Post-Dispatch, Oct. 15, 1929. That statement follows:

Since the enactment of the Missouri Public Service Commission act a public utility must obtain a certificate of public convenience and necessity from the commission before building a public utility plant and commencing operations, or to extend existing service beyond that authorized by previous certificate. Consent of local authorities to the operation is required before issuance of the certificate.

Where a utility has received a certificate, or was operating at the time the act was passed, it is not necessary for such utility to secure any further permission from the commission, or to do any act so far as the commission is concerned, in order to continue operation if its franchise should expire.

If the franchise has expired and the compani is operating under a day-to-day permit or by suf-ferance, without any permit, it would not have to obtain permission of the Public Service Commission for such operation.

Such a utility, however, would still be under the jurisdiction of the commission, and the commission would be bound to exercise jurisdiction if a proper case was filed before it. If, under the foregoing circumstances, the company wanted a higher fare than that which they may have agreed upon with the city, the commission would have to act if an application for such an increase were filed with the commission. The expiration of the franchise and the manner in which the utility was thereafter operating would not affect the jurisdiction of the commission over the

After the expiration of a franchise, the certificate of convenience and necessity (if one had been issued in the case of commencement of operations since the passage of the Public Service Commission act) would not serve the office of a franchise for the use of city streets or municipal property.

The commission has no power to grant a franchise or its equivalent.

If the franchise had expired, and the company chose to apply to the commission for permission to continue operation, it would not be a question for the commission to act upon.

If the city and company had reached an agreement upon continuance of operation, or the city had given a day-to-day permit, the commission would have no power to stop the operation.

If the city chose to oust the company upon expiration of the franchise, or to oust the company for violation of terms imposed by the city as a condition of being permitted to operate without a franchise, the commission would give the com-

A LANDMARK OF PROGRESS.

There was a ceremonial in St. Louis Thursday which may, without exaggeration, be called a landmark of human progress. We refer to the laying of the corner stone of the McMillan Hospital and Oscar Johnson Institute "for the advancement of knowledge and alleviation of the ills of eye, ear, nose and throat."

This institution, dedicated solely to the service of numanity, is the result of the splendid generosity of St. Louis citizens, together with handsome contributions from the Rockefeller Foundation and the Commonwealth Fund of New York.

The foundational gift was made by the late Mrs. William B. McMillan. Associated in the fine endeavor are Mrs. Irene Johnson, Mrs. Horton Watkins, Dr. and Mrs. William A. Shoemaker, William K. Bixby, Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, Mrs. John F. Shoemaker, the Shapleigh family, as a memorial to Dr. John B. Shapleigh; Mrs. John Duncan and Mrs. William Keech, the Ewing Eye Clinic fund, in honor of Dr. Arthur E. Ewing, and E. Arthur and Frank E. Hall of Muncie, Ind.

The institute will be housed in a 14-story structure at Kingshighway boulevard and Euclid avenue, in the Barnes Hospital group. This site was chosen, as Dr. Harvey J. Howard, executive director of the institute, explained, because "it is incongruous to erect an eye, ear, nose and throat hospital wholly separate from a general hospital, for, more than ever before, we realize that most diseases are not local, but general and that an affection of the eye often means an involvement of many parts and other organs of the Patients will here receive, in the judgment of the profession, the most authoritative treatment. The genius of the institute, however, will be concerned primarily with the prevention of disease. It is the ambition of the founders and administrators to make the institute the recognized center of research in its special field. In the adequacy of its plant, staff, equipment and means, "all on a scale and to a degree of training never before attempted," as Gov. Caulfield so happily expressed it, it warrants this high

Only the impractical expect the differences in faith to be dissolved. The rest will agree that what Father Wilbur said for the Catholics applies to allthat such a conference teaches "how to disagree more intelligently, amiably and amicably with the others. Permanent continuance of the Seminar committee will lead to future discussions at which "intelligent amiable disagreement" should prevail.

That happened to Pat Hogan when he tried to explain. There can be only praise for officers who do their duty. Those who exceed it, as in the shameful Hogan affair, deserve condemnation.

600 Years of Smoke

Edward I in 1306 forbade use of coal in London because of its smell and grime; smoke has been a public problem ever since; cause of trouble often is improper firing; many cities are educating people to correct this; Pittsburg has made fine campaign to check nuisance; poisonous gases obscure sun and are detriment to health.

George A. Soper in the Woman's Journal.

OR more than 600 years the English people have had a smoke problem. In 1306 Edward I issued a proclamation prohibiting the importation of coal into London because of the smell and grime which it produced, and in 1684 the people of that city petitioned Parliament to prevent coal from being brought in. From that time to this, there has been a continuous agitation over smoke question, and it would appear that every possible aspect of this subject has been thoroughly studied. In these efforts American cities have done their full share The literature of the subject is large. Thousands of articles on smoke have published in the scientific and technical

It is not alone a question of law or of law enforcement. Often the offender does not know how to put a stop to the trouble. Often the cause is improper firing. Not infrequently there are no known devices which are capable of preventing smoke from the kind of fuel and grate which must be used.

A great deal depends on the size of the fire and consequently, the amount of skilled attention which can be given it. Experts are needed to show what can be done, insist that the proper remedies are employed, and see to it that correct preventive measures are used wherever practicable. Consequently many cities have found it desirable to estab lish anti-smoke bureaus or, if the city is small, designate some person to give his whole time to the smoke question.

In England a targe part of the smoke nutsance is due to the open fireplaces in private houses. In New York the trouble lies chiefly with buildings which are neither very large nor small; for the small ones use anthracite, which is smokeless, and the large ones find it advantageous to make provision for properly burning bituminous coal, which is cheaper.

A frequent cause of smoke lies in the ways in which the coal is used. We want our fires to burn uniformly, but in our dwellings we cannot or will not supply them with fuel in a way which makes this possible. We feed them as we feed ourselves, from time to time, and trust to the interior workings to attend to the regulating process. The ideal way to prevent smoke is to add the coal in a finely divided condition at the same rate at which it is consumed and uniformly over the whole grate surface. This is done mechanically in many industrial plants, but it is obviously impractical in small furnaces, stoves and open grates, where the feeding is done by hand.

Although the principal harm done by smoke is esthetic and economic, there are indirect effects of it upon health to which serious attention is now being given. The amount and value of the sunlight which falls upon the earth is impaired by a smoky blanket and the fact that children and grown-ups who live in cities get less than ir fair share of sun anyway but adds to the weight of the argument.
One of the best efforts ever made by a city to stop the smoke nuisance was that carried on by Pitsburg. It consisted of three parts. Part one consisted of an investtigation made from 1912 to 1914 by the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research. The measures needed to stop the nuisance. Part two consisted in securing the necessary legislation and doing the practical work required under it. A Bureau of Smoke Regulation was set up in the Department of Public Health. A permit is required before any fuel burning apparatus is installed, repaired or altered, the object here being to give the bureau a chance to satisfy itself that, with reasonable care, the apparatus can be operated without producing too dense air with reference to smoke, the actual sources of the trouble, and the practical

Measures were taken to improve the combustion of fuel, such as the use of steam-air syphons, larger openings in the fire doors or air ports in the sides of the furnaces. Settings were increased in height to provide a greater volume of combustion space, and mixing piers or other provisions for mixing es with air were insisted on. Firemen were instructed in the proper use of the damper. In many instances the stacks were made higher.

Third, another investigation was made in 1923-24 to see what improvement had been accomplished. It was found that while the amount of tarry material had decreased, the total amount of ash and other solid material which was being deposited from the atmosphere had increased. This was explained on the ground that the measures which had been taken to increase the draught had carried a larger amount of solid material up the stacks than formerly. B. H. Meller, chief of the Bureau of tion investigations, proposed that the whole problem be studied through the co-operation f a number of national organizations, including the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers and the American Public Health Association. More and more attention is being given throughout this country and Europe to the question of harmful gases in the atmosphere of cities. Coal may be burned without smoke and yet give off products which are disagreeable, poisonous and corrosive. Industrial works may pour into the atmosphere tons of harmful gases and vapors without casting a smudge upon the sky. Although the im-perfect burning of coal produces deadly carbon monoxide, the principal source of this gas in the streets of our cities is the auto.

Commenting editorially upon the increasing hazards from poisonous gases, the Journal of the American Medical Association recently said: "In modern life, new customs, cently said: "In modern life, new customs, new machinery, new tastes develop with startling rapidity. Manufacturers promote and our people use new products with amasing avidity and with utter disregard for hazards to health and life. The public has learned to depend on authorities for the responsibility for its health and safety. Only too often the thing we call progress moves too often the thing we call progress moves on before authority can investigate or grant assurance. Apparently catastrophe and death alone can make mankind even hesitate in its headlong pace."

Missouri Outlaws Nepotism

From the Ohio State Journal.

S IX years ago the people of Missouri adopted an anti-nepotism amendment to the State Constitution. It was aimed at officials who insist on keeping relatives on the public payroll. It was specific, one prevision being ouster from office for violation.

Lawmakers in that State had little sympathy with the amendment, they wrote no law carrying its provisions into effect, and repo tism was practiced generally.

Recently the Attorney-General brought quo warranto proceedings in the Supreme Court, asking the ouster of two official in one county, each of whom had appointed his office. wife to the best paying place in his office. The Supreme Court decided the Attorney-General was right, the people of Missouri had a constitutional provision that was selfexecuting. The offending officials were summarily removed from office. It was a decision entirely in harmony with the purpose of the people in writing and approving the constitutional amendment against loading pay-rolls with the names of relatives of officials.

Nepotism is one of the foolish practices in olitics found in all states and in most political subdivisions. The public has never approved the idea, has objected to it many times, but greedy officials continue to prac-tice it. Fortunately, there is one state where the practice now has been outlawed in a most effective manner. The decision of the upreme Court, the summary ousting of two lected county officials, makes the will of the people operative. It was a hard blow for nepotism. It was a fine example for ther states.

Which Waterway?

From the Chicago Tribune.

THE ROCK ISLAND ARGUS Works Itself into a lather over the failure of our the St. Lawrence waterway. The view is inresting because typical of the po thinking of a considerable section of the dississippi Valley.

Rock Island is on the Mississippi River. A flourishing river transport would benefit Rock Island. The completion of the St. Lawrence waterway would serve to diver-traffic which might use Rock Island's waterway to another route many hundreds of miles away. Rock Island is destined to become a port of some consequence on the Mississippi, but considerable thought would be required to show any benefits Rock Island is likely to make the complete. Island is likely to receive from the opening of the St. Lawrence.

The measure before Congress which is of immediate and pressing concern to Rock Island is the Ilinois waterway, if only be-cause the taxpayers of that city have conributed their share of the $20,000,000 bond seue which was to pay for the connection between the Lakes and the Guif. No return between the Lakes and the Guif. No return on that money can be obtained until the waterway is completed and only by a congressional appropriation can the locks and dams be finished within the near future. The completion of the Illinois waterway promises much to Rock Island because of the increase in barge service that will follow. To the extent that the Illinois waterway is successful, agitation for the imprevaments of the upper river will be rewarded.

and the doubles championship, Harold Wiese and Vernon Tietjen of Washington University today opposed another Missouri Valley pair in one of the semifinal matches in the central intercollegiate tennis tourney being held at the Chicago Town and Tennis Club.

The St. Louisans meet Frank Brody and Max Everett of Drake University in one of the semifinals. A victory will send them against either Byrum and Householder of Western State Teachers' College of Kalamazoo or against Bergherm-Anriel of Northwestern University. The doubles final will be played late today.

Wiese and Tietjen moved into the semifinal round by winning a second round match from the Detroit City College pair of McNaughton and Cauley in straight sets, 6—2, 5—2. The steady overhead game of the St. Louisans proved a potent factor in the result, and at not time were McNaughton and Cauley able to threaten.

Tietjen is Eliminsted.

St. Louis was left without a representative in the singles competition when Tietjen was defeated in the semi-final round by Warren Byrum of Western State Teachers College, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2. Byrum, seeded No. 1, meets Frank Brody of Drake, seeded No. 2, in the singles final.

Tietjen's quarter-final match sent him onto the court against John Eglehoff of Detroit University, and the Detroiter proved a not too difficult foe, losing 6-2, 6-2. In the semi-final Byrum proved an opponent of far higher caliber. Playing the net he piled up a three-game lead on Tletjen in the early stages of the first set, and although Tletjen kept fairly well in the running he was unable to cope consistently with Byrum's hard driving.

Harold Wiese, Tletjen's team-mate, was eliminated in the first round of the singles Thursday by Bruce Brayton of Northwestern.

SYNOPSIS

Dennis Stanhope is a frequent visitor to Alum Green, near Lon don, where Jimmy Raleigh and his sister, Madge, live. Although Dennis is three years older than Jimmy, a strong friendship develops be tween the boys. When Dennis goes away to Barford to school he became Jimmy's hero, because of his athletic process. Later Jimmy arrives at Barford and finds a gulf between himself and Dennis for the latter is now a school monitor. Germany invades Belgium and Dennis is sent to Flanders as an infantry officer. He wins a military cross and returns home on leave to find everything changed. Madge is working in a hospital. Stanhope returns to the front and Jimmy, now a second lieutenant, is ordered to France.

CHAPTER X.

Y leaning well out of the window Jimmy could see a solitary figure waiting on the distant platform. His first feeling of pleasure turned suddenly to pity for his father, waiting there alone. He almost regretted sending the wire, for he had hoped Madge would have been able to come too. It would be rather difficult to say "good-by" to his father on that bare little platform-not knowing how long the train would give them-strange people gazing out at them from carriage windows. It would have been easier if Madge had been there too.

The engine shut off steam and ran out of the trees into the clearing round the station. The brakes began to hold, the solitary figure grew larger, and Jimmy's anxiety changed to a pang of disappointment. It was not his father standing there; it was a strange, fat man, with a bowler hat and a red face. As the train came to a standstill Jimmy searched for the old car in the station yard. But the yard was empty; his father had not come.
